Inclusive Play

- ✓ An engaging free-form exercise that increases muscle tone, posture, balance and wellbeing for people across many spectrums of disability
- ✓ Air cushion jumping can be used for Rebound Therapy, and is safer than other forms of jumping and bouncing, requiring fewer safety features
- ✓ Allows the possibility of intellectual development with fun and fitness. For example, counting jumps, counting flash cards or introducing long range visual focus according to jump height
- ✓ Improves motor skills, core stability and encourages coordination and movement
- ✓ Aids sleep and boosts mood
- ✓ Research has shown that children with autism find it difficult to control their actions, but jumping on an air cushion integrates their actions into one simple movement
- ✓ Helps with overcoming feelings of anxiety and releases energy in a positive, safe way
- ✓ Is an inclusive, social interaction for mentally or physically disabled children and adults to enjoy together with family members, siblings, friends and peers
